Dear Mrs Thornton

Echo scans of your heart and an MRI scan of your heart make it likely you have a genetic condition called hypertrophic cardiomyopathy.

It is advised that first degree relatives - your siblings and children - are screened for the same condition. Screening usually comprises a referral by their GP to a local Cardiology Service where they would undergo an ECG, an echo scan of the heart, and a clinical assessment.

Do please pass on copies of this letter on as you see fit. Thank you.

Yours sincerely Dr A J M Broadley, Consultant Cardiologist
